

Surveyor 1 (Bob): He took a bribe to make the castle look bigger; he is money-hungry and out for profit, and he is trying to sabotage the other applicants.

First Meeting:

Bob - Hello there, I'm Bob.

Bob - Welcome to my office. I'm an experienced surveyor, and I know the Fetteresso Estate like the back of my hand.

Bob - You should choose me as your assistant; I know I would be a great help to you.

Player - Tell me more about yourself.

Bob - I worked for the previous Master of Fetteresso Castle.

Bob - He trusted me implicitly.

[END]

Player - What makes you say that?

Bob - The other two cartographers are rubbish.

Bob - You can't trust them.

Bob - I worked for the previous Master of Fetteresso Castle, and he trusted me implicitly.

Bob - I know the estate like the back of my hand, and I can help you make a great map.

[END]

Confrontation [FLAG NEEDED - Investigated Bob's map.]:

Bob - Hello there. How can I help you?

Player - You seem to have misrepresented the size of Fetteresso Castle.

Bob - The castle? I'm not sure what you mean.

Player - Explain yourself!

Bob - Ok, ok. I'll tell you.

Bob - The old master wanted me to... exaggerate the size of Fetteresso Castle. It was very important to him, you see?

Bob - He also made it worth my while... if you catch my drift.

[END]

Player - It's ok we all make mistakes.

Bob - Thanks for being understanding.

Bob - I heard that Michael got lost on his last survey.

[APPLY FLAG - Michael got lost?]

[END]

Casual meeting:

Bob - You again. What do you need?

Player - Just passing through!

Bob - Oh, alright. Good day then.

[END]

Player - How are you today?

Bob - I'm just dandy, thank you! How are you?

Player - I am well.

Bob - Great! See you around.

[END]

Player - I could be better.

Bob - Oh... my condolences.

[END]

Player - Tell me something about yourself.

Bob - I enjoy a glass of whiskey in the evening.

Bob - The old master and I knew each other for a long time.

[END]

Surveyor 2 (Dave): He is incompetent; he mistakenly drew the river much larger than it should be, and then proceeded to lie about it.

First Meeting:

Dave - ...

Dave - Oh! I didn't see you there. Who are you?

Player - Hello... I'm the newly appointed surveyor for Fetteresso Estate. Were you not expecting me? I'm here to select an assistant.

Dave - Oh! Of course, of course... What do you need?

Player - I'm here to find out more about you!

Dave - Well, I don't know what to say...

Dave - I am a very good cartographer!

Dave - ...

Player - Anything else?

Dave - ...

Player - Ok! Thank you.

[END]

Player - Ok! Thank you.

[END]

Confrontation [FLAG NEEDED - Investigated Dave's map.]:

Dave - ...

Player - Hello?

Dave - Ah! Hello again.

Dave - Why are you here?

Player - I studied your map, and I noticed a bit of a discrepancy.

Player - The river looks... quite large.

Dave - I made a mistake with the river? I can't seem to remember...

Dave - ...

Dave - Oh! I remember now! I surveyed that area in the summer of 1797... it rained a lot that year!

[APPLY FLAG - It rained that year? (unlocks record book)]

[END]

Casual meeting:

Dave - ...Hm?

Player - I was wondering if you had thought of anything else you're good at?

Dave - Did I mention I was good at cartography?

Player - ...Yes.

Dave - Oh, well... I'll see you later.

[END]

Player - No, tell me all about it!

Dave - Oh! Well! I've been doing it for years. I've done lots of walking, and... surveying.

Dave - I'm very busy at the moment. How about you visit another time?

[END]

Player - Just passing through.

Dave - Oh... well, enjoy your day.

[END]

Surveyor 3 (Michael): He is young but enthusiastic; he surveyed the area before the railway was complete, and is very competent for an amateur surveyor.

First Meeting:

Michael - Hello there, I'm Michael.

Michael - I'm relatively new to surveying, but I have a lot of enthusiasm, and I'm a quick learner!

Player - That's great to hear! Accurately surveying the area will be no small undertaking.

Michael - I know the Fetteresso Estate is a bit of a mess, but I think I could be a great help to you in sorting it out.

Player - It was nice to meet you, Michael. I'll see you again soon.

Michael - Cheerio!

[END]

Player - I'll be back later.

Michael - Goodbye.

[END]

Confrontation [FLAG NEEDED - Investigated Michael's map.]:

Michael - Hello again! What can I do for you?

Player - You didn't record the railway on your survey.

Michael - The railway... I definitely don't remember there being a railway...

Michael - I do seem to remember a workforce clearing trees, though.

Michael - I'm sorry, I hope this doesn't reflect too poorly on my abilities.

Player - I understand, thank you for being honest.

Michael - I appreciate your understanding.

Michael - If there's anything else you need, don't hesitate to drop by again.

[END]

Player - A railway is a pretty big thing to miss...

Michael - That's true... it's also an impermanent feature.

Michael - I don't mean to be rude, of course, but surely it not existing yet is an understandable reason to have not recorded it?

Michael - Let me know if there's any other issues..

[END]

Casual Meeting:

Michael - Hello again, care for a spot of tea?

Player - Just dropping by.

[END]

Player - That sounds lovely.

Michael - Here you go. How can I help you?

Player - How are you today?

Michael - I'm doing swell, thank you. And you?

Player - Dandy.

[END]

Player - I've got a bit of a back ache, but that's why I'm looking for an assistant.

Michael - That's unfortunate to hear. Hopefully some good tea can put you right!

[END]

Player - Tell me about yourself.

Michael - I'm a fiddle player, and I quite enjoy birdwatching.

Michael - Surveying is the perfect opportunity to spot all sorts of critters.

Michael - If we end up working together, perhaps we could enjoy doing so in the field?

Player - That sounds lovely.

[END]

Player - I'd rather remain focused on my work.

[END]

[FLAG NEEDED - Michael got lost?] Player - I heard that you got a bit turned around during your survey?

Michael - Who told you that? Bob?

Michael - I don't want to cast a bad light upon anyone, but you can't trust what he says.

Michael - His surveys are entirely decided by bribes from stakeholders, he is only influenced by money.

Michael - I also quite certainly did not get lost during my survey.

Player - I see... thank you for helping me clear this up.

Michael - Of course. Don't hesitate to drop by again. I have lots of tea in reserve.

[END]
